At Day Kimball Healthcare, your primary care practitioner (PCP) is at the core of our patient-centered medical home (PCMH) approach to healthcare. In this model, your PCP doesn’t just care for your day-to-day health needs and treat you when you’re sick; he or she also serves as your healthcare advocate by coordinating all aspects of your care throughout our system.

Your PCP’s first priority is to keep you well by providing preventive care and helping you to manage your own health, thereby improving your quality of life and reducing your healthcare costs.

But as the “hub” of your healthcare universe, your primary care team is also your direct connection to all the other integrated care services available through Day Kimball Healthcare. If specialized care becomes necessary, your PCP is there to not only provide referrals but also to ensure that all of your care providers are working together effectively and efficiently to deliver the best possible care.

Day Kimball Healthcare offers integrated, comprehensive care close to home. To learn more about all of our primary care services visit daykimball.org/primarycare.

Family Medicine

At Day Kimball Healthcare, your primary care practitioner (PCP) is at the core of our patient-centered medical home (PCMH) approach to healthcare. In this model, your PCP doesn’t just care for your day-to-day health needs and treat you when you’re sick; he or she also serves as your healthcare advocate by coordinating all aspects of your care throughout our system.

Family medicine practitioners provide continuing, comprehensive health care for individuals of all ages. As the name implies, family medicine practitioners can provide care to all members of a family, offering continuity of care within the household. Some family medicine physicians also provide obstetrical care for women.

The physicians and Advanced Practice Registered Nurses (APRNs) in our family medicine practices focus on helping their patients achieve optimal physical and mental health through accessible, safe, cost-effective care that is based on best evidence, responsive to the needs and preferences of patients, and respectful of the patient’s family, personal values and beliefs.

Same-Day Office Visits
When a minor illness or injury arises, your primary care team is there for you with same-day appointments during regular office hours. This provides not only convenience but also continuity of care, allowing you to be seen and treated by a practitioner right within the same primary care office where you already have an established history of care. Because it is billed as an office visit, it also helps you avoid the higher cost of walk-in or emergency care.

Our Integrated Network of Care
As your “patient centered medical home” (PCMH), your family medicine physician and the rest of your primary care team also coordinate and facilitate your care throughout our system. To aid in this effort, we’ve designed our integrated system to allow your primary care team and our walk-in center, emergency department, specialists, diagnostic imaging technicians, laboratory technicians and other healthcare professionals to “talk” about your health through electronic medical records that provide instant access to your medical information. This allows your entire care team to make an informed and comprehensive evaluation of your condition and to provide top-quality care within a truly integrated and holistic approach that also eliminates errors and redundant services to help you control your healthcare costs.
